The murder was one of the most brutal that has occurred in years.

Mrs. Anstine and her husband left home together in the morning. They drove to Red Lion, where the woman wanted to have her teeth attended to by a dentist, and also wanted to do some shopping. Her husband drove on to York to buy a binder. Mrs. Anstine stated to walk to her home, which is only two miles from Red Lion.

In the afternoon her family wondered why she did not return home, and a search was made along the road to Red Lion.

Near the woods searchers found bloom the road. There were near by evidence, of a desperatic struggle.
